The Gyrations of the Louisville Journal on the slavery question are highly amusing to all parties in this latitude. Slavery has become as great an evil as it was a blessing some time ago. It is as important now as the slaveholder's right to his property was in the days of the Republic. Let them protest in holding his slave in a Territory where the people didn't want African slavery. Indeed, slavery is as bad now as the Pope or the Catholic Church was any nine or ten years ago.

The Journal is deeply concerned about the slaveholder; about the men up in the blue-grass region who own slaves. It wishes to relieve them from an impending calamity. They have lost many of their slaves, and are likely to lose more; uncertain of retaining any. So emancipate them all, and then start under a different system for the negro. He is as much of a genius as the man who broke up his chitwain in order to show how well he could put the pieces together with Spaulding's glue.

As an evidence of progress in the new faith, we notice that the editor of the Journal has got a glimpse of the designs of Providence—sent among the prophets!

The negroes of Kentucky are to be colonized in Africa. We had thought that all sensible men had seen the folly of any experiment to remove the colored population from this country; but if Providence designs it, and has appointed the Journal and its new party to carry out the purpose, it's all right. We are not so much concerned for the slaveowners generally. We know of no men better able to take care of themselves than they are. They have been grossly wronged, but they can shift for themselves. If they want to add their negroes free, it is their business. Let them provide for their support, so that they will not be a burden on other people's hands, nor in other people's way, and that is all that can be asked. Let the Journal and its party let these slaveholders and their property alone, and they will do as they please.

As to the blessings of free labor, we propose to the Journal to test the matter. Let the editor go over to Indiana and submit the question to any county. Indiana wants labor; the more of it the better. Now, will they take the free laborers of African descent from this State, any one who should to a county, men, women and children?

Our neighbors have tried free negro labor. They have had a settlement here and there of the class of population, and understood it better than we do. If the editor will not do that, let him ask any of the counties of Kentucky where there are few or no slaves how many free negroes they will take from the blue-grass region.

The editor of the Journal knows perfectly well what the response to a suggestion of this sort would be from any county in this State or elsewhere. Yet he scribbles away about the difficulties on hand, and then, after the most approved fashion of a party fighter, tenders his party supporters as a remedy.

The editor of the Journal exhorts the Legislature to follow its advice, and then gives a scolding warning about what the next Legislature will do. We have often heard these pretensions, promises and minatory denunciations of the Journal before.

When this Legislature was elected this subject was not before the State. The present members are not authorized to act on the subject at all. We have had enough of this late, this foretelling of public opinion. We have had men elected for one purpose who proceeded to do another. We owe the present rebellion to this violation of just republican principles.

We trust the people of this State will not be bullied into action on such a subject. The institution of slavery in this State as it is, is the best for the white man, and incomparably best for the negro. Emancipation would only damage the one temporarily, but it would inflict infinite suffering upon the latter. It would be a crime with no reasonable excuse.

We know it is of no use to urge such a consideration upon a real Abolitionist or a partisan. The former is on the subject a confirmed idiot; the latter is as blind as a Mammoth Cave cat in all considerations, except what party permits to shine upon his perverted vision.

The mass of this State have not yet taken leave of common sense; and all the positions of the Journal as to what they will do are not worth pointing. The Pope and the Catholic Church would both have gone up or gone down long since if the premonitions of the Journal had been heeded; and as to slavery, as long as the African race exists in large numbers in the South, the Journal & Co. can only prevent slavery in some shape, when they can make the Ohio river run up hill.

Senator Foote, of Richmond, or the Confederacy in general, has discovered that the rebellion is a despotism. He has been a long while finding it out, and very dull not to force it at the start. To wield the whole power of a country to the last extremity requires a despotism. Nations have failed to maintain free institutions because they would have war. Republicanism and standing armies do not live together. The more despotic the war, the less freedom there is.

The conscription in the South has been arbitrary and searching. Every home has been invaded by prying eyes. Both men and property have been taken to support the cause. Strange that men so devoted to what they call independence must be forced to fight for it! We doubt if it is consistent with free institutions at all to compel men to fight who don't want to. Whilst the Union remained in harmony, it possessed an advantage that men will appreciate, perhaps, after it is lost. It was so powerful it never could have needed a conscription or a draft to fight any enemy we could have. The Government had no need of requiring part of a citizen's life to be devoted to military duties. We were too powerful to be disturbed by all the military we ever might need.
